Liberty Bonds and $200 in Pennies Ignored—Third Holdup.

NEW CARLISLE, June 21.—(AP)—Hiding all night in the New Carlisle National bank, Main and Jefferson streets, three masked bandits overpowered attaches as they reported to duty shortly before 7:30 a. m. today, and robbed the institution of $11,800, mostly in silver and currency. Approximately $200 in pennies and Liberty bonds were ignored. This was the third time the bank was robbed in the past several years.

The first persons to appear at the bank about 8:15 was Horace Grino, a clerk, whose duty is to open up each morning. He reported at the usual time and no sooner unlocked the door and entered the banking room than he was covered with guns and ordered to "keep still and obey orders."
The bandits immediately instructed him to open the safe and hand out all of the money.
Fully aware that the safe would necessarily await the time lock expiration, Grino fled to the rear of the building and hid. It was time for the opening of the safe.

COLUMBUS, O., June 21.—(AP)—The city of Columbus today won its fight for a 48-cent natural gas rate when the Ohio supreme court reversed the state utilities commission order fixing the rate at 65 cents.

At the same time, the high court ruled that rates the Dayton Power and Light Co. proposed to charge in Sidney, Washington C. H., Troy and Piqua, were too high. The decision sustains the action of the utilities commission which had dismissed the proposed increases.

The Columbus gas case had been dragging through the courts for many years. Several years ago, the city fixed a gas rate which was not acceptable to the company, and it appealed to the utilities commission. Failing to get prompt action, the company went to the United States district court where Judge Beson W. Hough held a 48-cent rate was compensatory.

The utilities commission recently ruled that the rate for the state of Ohio should be 20 cents more than the rate for the city of Dayton. The utilities commission recently ruled that the rate for the state of Ohio should be 20 cents more than the rate for the city of Dayton.

Resolution to This Effect Passed Despite Opposition of Mayor.

What immediate bearing the Ohio supreme court ruling in the Columbus gas rate case will have on the Dayton gas rate controversy was very indefinite Wednesday.

Although the court ruled that the Columbus rate should be 48 cents, it appeared likely that the case would now be appealed to the United States supreme court. If this is done it will mean another delay of several months before a decision is given with the result that local officials will not have any more definite information on how to proceed than they have had since the matter first became an issue. The delay in coming to a final decision in the local gas rate controversy has been due partially to the fact that city officials wanted to see what happened in the Co-

Wisconsin, 648,031 to 141,518; Rhode Island, 160,244 to 20,874; Wyoming, about 64,000 delegates to a state convention at mass meetings and county conventions, New Jersey, 573,532 to 90,733; New York (unofficial) 1,960,000 to 200,000; Delaware, 46,000 to 13,695; Nevada elected 40 repeal and no anti-repeal delegates to a state convention at county conventions, Illinois (incomplete) 2,193,845 to 305,901; Indiana (unofficial) 587,062 to 312,120; Massachusetts (unofficial) 441,105 to 38,844.

DES MOINES, Ia., June 21.—(AP)—Iowa has joined the wet column of state's favoring repeal of the Eighteenth amendment by a 3 to 2 vote.

Rolling up a vote against the amendment the size of which surprised even the repealists, the state, dry by statute since 1916, instructed the 99 delegates elected in yesterday's election to vote for repeal at their convention July 10.

A huge majority in the heavily populated counties of the state swung the balance in favor of repeal while the rural sections voted approximately even for and against the proposal.

The count, with 2304 of the state's 2435 precincts reported, showed a vote of 368,801 for repeal and 242,812 against. The remaining precincts were scattered through 28 counties and could not affect the final result.

Of the 71 counties from which complete returns had been received only 28 of them were recorded in the dry column. Taking the 99 counties as a whole, 35 or 36 of them appeared likely to cast a majority in favor of retention of the Eighteenth amendment.

Yesterday's decision voted another chapter in the long continued battle over liquor control which has enlivened the state's history since 1836. In the past, it has tried both ways on prohibition, has voted out modified license, local option and complete prohibition.

Commenting on the outcome Gov. Clyde Herring said: "It appears that Iowa is done with the bootleggers and the racketeer."

MANCHESTER, N. H., June 21.—(AP)—New Hampshire yesterday swung into step with the repeal states.

Granite state voters yesterday gave a more than two to one majority to the 10 repeal-pledged delegates to the Eighteenth amendment. The vote was: For repeal, 75,999; against repeal, 30,340.

Gov. John G. Winant had no statement to make as the result of the balloting on the amendment, but he previously said he soon would call the elected delegates to the state house to ratify the popular sentiment in favor of the Twenty-first amendment, which would repeal the Eighteenth.

The vote was slightly more than half that cast in the last election and 47 towns among the smaller rural communities voted for the dry position, but recently prevalent in New Hampshire. The huge wet majority rolled up in the larger cities, however, gave the repealists their widest margin.

New Hampshire ratified the national prohibition law in 1919, two years after enacting a state prohibition law. This year, however, 5.2 per cent beer and wine was legalized in the granite state and the legislature passed a measure which would legalize six per cent beer in the event the Eighteenth amendment was repealed.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 21.—(AP)—An avalanche vote of more than 6 to 1 for repeal placed Connecticut squarely in the ranks of the 14 states with state ratification of the proposed 21st amendment, which would end national prohibition.

Fifty delegates, 15 from the state at large, and one from each of the 85 senatorial districts, were selected to meet in convention July 11 at Hartford pledged to vote unanimously to ratify the proposed amendment.

With only a light vote cast, less

More than half that cast in the last presidential election, the repealists won a decisive victory, sweeping the cities by as much as 12 to 1, and carrying all but a few of the traditionally dry rural townships. Complete unofficial returns gave:

For repeal, 236,915. Against repeal, 35,349. The result came as no surprise to wets and drys alike, who agreed before the election that the state which never ratified the Eighteenth amendment would vote to reject it. Gov. Wilbur L. Cross said: "The result in Connecticut is what was generally expected. It is gratifying that the vote was so large. It gives emphasis to the decisiveness of the verdict. The outlook for speedy repeal now seems assured."

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP)—Mrs. Ella A. Boole, national president of the Women's Christian Temperance union, expressed keen disappointment today over the result of the repeal election in Iowa.

"We rather expected Connecticut and New Hampshire to vote for repeal," she said, "but we had great hopes for Iowa. But it seems that Iowa, too, has been overcome by the great wet wave. "I do not believe that sentiment in the rural districts has changed. It was the vote of the cities, especially along the Mississippi river and along the western border. Of course, I'm sorry."

"The drys are just doing their best. Of course, we'll have to accept the result, whatever it is, but I do not believe that repeal will be ratified by the required number of states."

"At any rate, until 36 states do ratify the Eighteenth amendment is still the law of the land."

WASHINGTON, June 21.—(AP)—Terminating the Iowa repeal vote "asounding" Joseph Shouse, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, today challenged prohibition leaders to name three states which will favor continuation of the Eighteenth amendment.

"Ten days ago," he said in a statement, "I defined the leaders of the prohibition cause to name six states that will stand out against repeal of the Eighteenth amendment."

"This they refused to attempt. I don't blame them because there aren't six . . . in all probability repeal will be ratified by every state of the union."

BANDITS BOND

Grisso realized that his only alternative was to work the combination and carry out orders. However, the robbers could reach only the silver money and complained bitterly.

"Open the inner compartments of this safe and do it in a hurry or you'll get yours," came from the chief as Grisso fumbled around, apparently unable to make any progress.

"I'm your clerk here," pretended Grisso, and "don't know much about this safe."

It was Grisso's hope he could "stall out" the robbers until Cashier Carl Enoch's return. This he succeeded in doing, but in the meantime Miss Mata Taylor, assistant cashier, arrived at the bank.

her face and she was terrified. She likewise said she could not reach the currency, and, like Grisso, she was bound and compelled to lie on the floor in the rear room.

Both were cautioned to remain quiet and were well guarded as the bandit trio was determined to make a successful haul and an equally successful getaway, which they did.

The robbers hid behind the bank counter and kept a sharp lookout for anyone approaching the building. They were especially alert when Cashier Enoch appeared on the investigation. Though he was forced to unlock the front door and thought it strange the employees were late, he walked in not expecting to be confronted by a holdup gang.

Cashier Enoch was powerless in the grasp of the robbers and carried out their orders minutely, after first attempting to delay proceedings. A few sharp threats brought action on his part and in a short time the trio had gathered up thousands of dollars in currency to add to the loot which they had previously collected and placed in bags.

They lost no time in leaving the bank by a rear door and were seen running for their car, which had been kept running in charge of a fourth member of the gang, by Mrs. Martha Weeks, who lives next door to the bank.

Mrs. Weeks suspected something was wrong and immediately called up the authorities to inquire what was wrong at the bank.

An investigation was started, and Cashier Enoch, who had been gagged and bound by the robbers before they left the bank, was found, as well as Grisso and Asa, in the car, which was being driven by Cashier Taylor.

Cashier Enoch, although he did not know where the other bank attaches were during the time he was held in custody, said the robbers had an idea that they were being held in hiding in one of the secluded rooms. After the bandits had fled they managed to make their presence known to the cashier and called for help.

The robbers drove east on Route 71, scattering the contents of a keg of roofing nails as they sped away to prevent effective pursuit. No doubt they would have been successful in this, except that they had such a good start that officials of the first machine gun club, a motorist driving toward New Carlisle, passed the bandit car which he said was traveling at a terrific rate. Immediately after passing the first machine gun club, the car ran into a string of nails, 20 of which punctured his tires. He could give only a meager description of the make and their car.

Cashier Enoch's, however, said the men appeared to be about 30 years of age but as they had their features covered he was unable to give the Clark co. authorities much assistance in furnishing an accurate description. He felt, however, that if the men were captured he would be able to identify them. It is believed the robbers turned to the north toward the reservoir territory instead of proceeding to Springfield 12 miles away.

The bandits were of the "hard-boiled" type, although they did not harm their victims, other than cause them considerable misery by the taut binding of the ropes around their arms and legs.

The perpetrators of the holdup were white men, Cashier Enoch reported.

The New Carlisle National bank is capitalized at $25,000 and has deposits of approximately $200,000. It is a solid institution and has weathered two previous robberies, the last of which was perpetrated during the latter part of 1931 when three Negroes invaded the place but did not succeed in escaping. One of the number was killed in running from the bank. Carl G. Osborn, Dayton innkeeper, who was a member of a crew waiting near the place, saw the Negroes running away and gave pursuit. He shot one of the desperadoes and captured another. Other members of a posse rounded up a third. Two of the robbers in the holdup are serving time in the Ohio penitentiary.

Miss Mata Taylor, a clerk in the bank at that time, was with her sister, Maud Taylor, and the cashier and they were alone in the bank when the robbery took place.

Virtually all of the money, consisting of several thousand dollars was recovered.

Previous to that time the bank was held up by William Sherman, a Dayton, a former New Carlisle sist the City Commission in its gas rate matters.

Another promise from Mayor McDonald that he would have a definite proposition to submit to the commission within a week.

Members of the commission were disinclined to comment definitely on the Columbus gas ruling, other than to say that the opinion in that case would have a lot to do in fixing the gas price for Dayton.

First information that the state tribunal had ruled on the Columbus case, given the City Commission and other officials by The Dayton News, immediately precipitated a heated discussion relative to the progress of the gas case locally.

Mayor McDonald, who has contended all along that he is in contact with eastern interests, who are not myths or ghosts, said he had received informally a definite proposition which he would be prepared to submit to the commission within a week, and, possibly, at a special meeting Friday.

Because of that situation the mayor asked that passage of the resolution involving the utilities commission assistance be delayed a week.

Commissioner Bish replied to the mayor's request, saying that if the mayor were sincere in the present and previous statements about these eastern interests, that he should come out in the open and take other members of the commission into his confidence, since the gas question was one of very wide community interest.

The mayor said he couldn't do that at this time for several reasons. Commissioner Breidenbach backed up the mayor's stand and the statements he had made. He also asked that the utilities resolution be delayed pending the receipt of the definite proposition from the mayor.

The resolution was, nevertheless, passed by a vote of three to two. Bish, Bracher and Starns voting aye and McDonald and Breidenbach voting nay.

Locally the gas rate question came up about a year ago. Some months ago the commission passed an ordinance calling for a 50-cent rate. The vote was three to two, McDonald, Bracher and Breidenbach voting for it.

McDonald has insisted all along that he has contacts with "eastern interests" who will be in a position to furnish plenty of gas at a
